Dear Friends,

While reading thank you letters from the Friends of Music 2010-11 scholarship recipients, it was hard not to think of families’ involvement and influence in the lives of these talented young musicians.

Katherine Williamson’s letter brought families to mind in a big way. Katherine, who is receiving the Alan P. Bell Memorial Friends of Music Scholarship, says that she comes from a family of musicians: “My father and stepfather are both in the Minnesota Orchestra, and my mother is a horn professor at the University of Minnesota. I grew up listening to Brahms’ symphonies on my father’s old LP player every Sunday morning and hanging out in the green room of the hall on the weekends. I’ve tried to imagine my life without the violin, without music, and the thought makes me cringe. I simply cannot go a day without it,” Katherine stresses.

Patrick Lenning, the recipient of the Patsy Earles Friends of Music Scholarship, grew up with two brothers who played instruments: viola and percussion. His mother was very supportive of the arts, so he took up playing the viola when he was seven years old. “Over the years I developed a deep passion for music and, especially, the sound of the viola, and I knew that I wanted to dedicate my life to aiding in the spread of classical music in society,” Patrick wrote.

Joshua M. Sieh grew up in a family of 11 siblings and two parents who all made music. From an early age, he was playing piano, violin, and singing, and learning the violin. The John and Adele Edgeworth Guarantor Scholarship enables Joshua to study recording arts at the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music.

Luckily for Katherine, Patrick, Joshua, and the other 1,600 or so students at the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music, they are still part of a family—the family of students, faculty, and staff who love making music and the people who make it. People connected with the Jacobs School of Music provide a very nurturing environment, similar to what these students would find in their own homes, but on a larger scale, of course.

Luckily that love extends to us—the Friends of Music donors who make so many of these young musicians’ dreams come true by making it possible for them to study music at Indiana University. For the 2010-11 academic year, the Friends of Music provided $411,000 in scholarships for some 80 talented young musicians. This is no small accomplishment, and it is one that we have pursued since our founding in 1964 and will continue to pursue. It is your love of music and young musicians, plus your generosity, that makes it all possible.

To help show our appreciation to our donors, the Friends presented the Three IU Tenors at a reception on Feb. 6. We had forgotten that it was Super Bowl Sunday, and we apologize to all of you who were pulled in two directions. For those donors who attended the Tenors program, it was a delightful experience. Andrew Lunsford, Anthony Webb, and Nick Fitzner treated us to a number of virtuosic arias. Following the tenors, many of us attended the Concert Orchestra performance in the Musical Arts Center, under the direction of David Effron: another fine experience. Next year, we promise to avoid hosting an event on Super Bowl Sunday, especially since the Super Bowl will be in Indianapolis and many of you may be attending. There’s certainly no sin in loving music and sports!

As we head into the 2011-12 academic year, remember that we are all part of the Jacobs School of Music family. Please donate as generously as you can to our talented young musicians. They will provide you with endless opportunities for enjoying their music during the coming year.

Ruth Albright, President
On Feb. 6, 2011, Friends of Music members were acknowledged for their contributions with a reception and performance by the Three IU Tenors, who were formed specifically for this event. The Friends of Music contributed $411,000 of scholarship monies for the 2010-11 academic year.

1. Arthur and Elaine Schenck share a moment of conversation with John and Julia Lawson.
2. Stephen and Sandra Moberly, Patsy Fell-Barker, Robert Barker, and a friend prepare to enjoy the Three IU Tenors performance.
3. O Sole Mio was so much fun as performed by Andrew Lunsford, Nick Fitzer, and Anthony Webb.
2010-2011 Friends of Music Scholarship Recipients

The mission of the Society of the Friends of Music is to raise money to provide scholarships for students at the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music. This year, some 80 students are the recipients of nearly $411,000 pledged by the Friends for these scholarships.

Thanks to our donors for helping to make the dream of an IU Jacobs School of Music education come true for these outstanding young musicians.

DAVID ALCRIGHT, 73

David Edward Albright, 73, of Bloomington, Ind., husband of Friends of Music President Ruth Albright, died peacefully at home on Aug. 17, 2010. Born in 1936, in Amo, Ind., Albright graduated from Indiana University with a Bachelor of Arts in Journalism and, in 1959, earned a master’s degree in journalism. He was editor of the Indiana Daily Student during his journalism studies at IU. He then received another master’s degree and his Ph.D. in international relations from Columbia University.

At the start of the Vietnam War, Albright served in the U.S. Army, working in the intelligence service. When he returned to New York, he worked several years for the Council on Foreign Relations. In 1971, he became an editor for the journal Problems of Communism, which was published by the United States Information Agency in Washington, D.C.

In 1982, Albright and Ruth moved to Montgomery, Ala., where he was a professor of national security at the Air War College. In 1994, the couple returned to their “roots” in Bloomington. Albright also worked as a senior research associate for the Center for the Study of Global Change. Albright was very involved in volunteer activities in the Bloomington area. In May 2010, he stepped down as president of the Theatre Circle. He was a past president of the National Society of Arts and Letters on the local level, a member of Bloomington Worldwide Friendship, and a member of the Bloomington Rotary Club.
